

From the Principal's Desk

Good news start to roll out everywhere everyday, so in Hiralal Mazumdar Memorial College for Women, Dakshineswar. Located in North 24 Parganas, this college is an academic hub for nearly one thousand five hundred girl students. Teaching and non-teaching staff along with other stakeholders are giving efforts to upgrade the quality of its academics to enable the students to cope up with new global challenges. Departments are trying hard to innovate and work with new ideas in Hiralal Mazumdar Memorial College for Women amidst of the recent trends of lack of creativity in education systems in many places. Independent thoughts are coming up as the mark of success in the College. Crisis in higher education due to pandemic in all over the world is far worse in girls' colleges. Merely the production of studious but creativity-challenged youth is not our goal, which is evident from the fact that in the New Normal life the teachers, students, staff and guardians are fighting together to go for making learning a fun, instead of making it a toxic productivity. Knowledge is everything and the College wants to save its students from the trend of churning out youth with a poor grasp of the subject matter; teachers are innovating new teaching-learning approach to transmit knowledge to the students, so that they can enrich themselves with that they are expected to know and can grasp better understanding of the challenges that India today faces, for which they alone can provide the solutions. The College is dedicatedly spending on Knowledge gathering and knowledge sharing through its Research Development Cell, Institutional Innovative Council and Incubation Centre.

Nobel laureate Amartya Sen had spoken of a 'crisis in Indian education' pointing to how India's educational policy had been shaped by the aspiration of its middle class. Creativity was hardly a part of higher education.

However, being a public institutions despite its intentions to serve a larger purpose, we have limitations for certain public regulations as an affiliating college. University Grants Commission (UGC), West Bengal State University, Higher Education Department in West Bengal etc. are the regulators and at the same time facilitators. College is trying to match its aspirations and goals to make it a shelter for the career aspirants, so as to ensure that nothing remains unmatched.
